

Centre for Policing Research and Learning

ACADEMIC-PRACTITIONER COLLABORATION

WORKSHOP

23 August 2017

Meeting Rooms 1-4, Michael Young Building, The Open University, MK7 6AA.

- 10.00 Coffee on arrival.
- 10.30 Welcome and Introduction to this workshop. Professor Jean Hartley, (The Open University).
- 10.45 “Academics and practitioners; creating effective co-production”. Professor Deborah Blackman (University of New South Wales, Canberra).
- 11.30 Reflections on working with academics in health research.
Dr Helen Walters, Consultant in Public Health Medicine (National Institute for Health Research)
- 12.15 “Research co-production and knowledge mobilisation in policing”. Professor Adam Crawford (University of Leeds and Director of the N8 Policing Research Partnership).
- 13.00 Lunch.
- 13.45 “Democratic dialogue to achieve academic and practitioner outcomes”.
Professor Jean Hartley (The Open University and Executive Director, Centre for Policing Research and Learning).
- 14.30 Reflections on academic-police partnerships: What seems to work (and what doesn't)
Dr Nicky Miller, Research Evidence Partnerships Manager, College of Policing
- 15.15 Plenary: what themes emerge from today? What concepts are most useful in thinking about academic-practitioner co-production? What actions can each take to improve working together? How can academics and practitioners learn the capabilities needed for collaboration?
- 15.45 Refreshments and depart.

Each presentation includes time for discussion with workshop participants.

We would like to thank the Citizenship and Governance strategic research area of The Open University for funding this workshop.